

Ivadell Ford

Ivadell Ford, 75, died Tuesday, July 3, 1990, in Provo, following a heart attack.

She was born Sept. 7, 1914, in Wallsburg, a daughter of Melburn A. and Jane Sabey Ford.

She received her education in the Provo City schools and graduated from Provo High School. She moved to San Francisco, Calif. where she was employed by H.S. Crocker Company, a lithography company, where she was in charge of stock control. She retired in 1976 and came back to Provo, where she has resided since, and cared for her mother for eight years.

She was a member of the LDS Church. She is survived by six brothers and one sister, Rodney D. Ford, Melburn S. Ford, Max Ford, Garth Ford, all of Provo; Howard J. Ford, Hal A. Ford, both of Sandy; Mrs. William L. (Beth Ford) Shafer, Silver Spring, Md. She was preceded in death by three brothers, Emmett D. Ford, Morris C. Ford, Merrell Duane Ford.

Funeral will be Friday, 2 p.m. at the Berg Drawing Room Chapel, 185 E. Center, Provo, where friends may call Thursday 6-8 p.m. or Friday one hour prior to services.

Burial Provo City Cemetery.

and both are buried at Wallsburg. John died March 24, 1938, and is buried in Wallsburg.

In later years, John married another fine woman, Celestia Higginson Johnson, at Provo, Utah. They had one son, Fordie Eugene. Celestia also had a son, Val Johnson, by her previous marriage.

When John was just nine years old he and his mother drove their teams and wagons across the plains to Utah. John's father, Martin, had decided that the time had come for them to leave, for the rebellion was raging between the North and South. John remembered so well seeing the soldiers marching past their place. Martin had sold his farm and crops, bought a team of horses, one of cows, and one of oxen and wagons and supplies, and they left. But Martin, being a carpenter and wheelwright, was kept busy repairing broken-down wagons, so couldn't take much time for driving, thus having wife and child take over the lines.

After coming from Provo to Wallsburg to live, John remembered living in the old fort and the fear they had of the Indians.

John was a tall, slender young man and a very good athlete. He was a musician, playing the violin and piccolo, and when a young man he sang in the Church choir. He was a carpenter and, with his brother William, made coffins, very beautifully built and finished. He was a fine blacksmith. He helped to get the ties out for building the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.

John was a rancher and cattleman. He had a fine ranch in the valley and raised a very good grade of cattle. He took keen interest in public affairs and in all social activities of his young days.

Mary Eleanor Nuttall Ford was a Church worker, taking part in all social gatherings as well. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. She did beautiful sewing on clothes by hand.

John spent most of his life in Wallsburg, among friends and with his family. He died at the old home in 1938. He sat on the grand jury of Wasatch in those early years.

JOHN FORD AND ELEANOR NUTTALL AND SARAH CELESTIA HIGGINSON JOHNSON

John Ford was born August 22, 1853, at Trader's Point, Mills County, Iowa, son of Martin Ford and Zibiah Meriba Stoker. He married Mary Eleanor Nuttall July 24, 1878. She was a daughter of William Ephraim Nuttall and Rosamond Watson. She was born September 22, 1860, at Provo, Utah. She died April 18, 1881, three days after her little son, John Ford, was born, on April 15. The baby died April 29, 1881.

937

and both are buried at Wallsburg. John died March 24, 1938, and is buried in Wallsburg.

In later years, John married another fine woman, Celestia Higginson Johnson, at Provo, Utah. They had one son, Fordie Eugene. Celestia also had a son, Val Johnson, by her previous marriage.

When John was just nine years old he and his mother drove their teams and wagons across the plains to Utah. John's father, Martin, had decided that the time had come for them to leave, for the rebellion was raging between the North and South. John remembered so well seeing the soldiers marching past their place. Martin had sold his farm and crops, bought a team of horses, one of cows, and one of oxen and wagons and supplies, and they left. But Martin, being a carpenter and wheelwright, was kept busy repairing broken-down wagons, so couldn't take much time for driving, thus having wife and child take over the lines.

After coming from Provo to Wallsburg to live, John remembered living in the old fort and the fear they had of the Indians.

John was a tall, slender young man and a very good athlete. He was a musician, playing the violin and piccolo, and when a young man he sang in the Church choir. He was a carpenter and, with his brother William, made coffins, very beautifully built and finished. He was a fine blacksmith. He helped to get the ties out for building the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.

John was a rancher and cattleman. He had a fine ranch in the valley and raised a very good grade of cattle. He took keen interest in public affairs and in all social activities of his young days.

Mary Eleanor Nuttall Ford was a Church worker, taking part in all social gatherings as well. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. She did beautiful sewing on clothes by hand.

John spent most of his life in Wallsburg, among friends and with his family. He died at the old home in 1938. He sat on the grand jury of Wasatch in those early years.

JOHN FORD AND ELEANOR
NUTTALL AND SARAH
CELESTIA HIGGINSON
JOHNSON

John Ford was born August 22, 1853, at Trader's Point, Mills County, Iowa, son of Martin Ford and Zibiah Meriba Stoker. He married Mary Eleanor Nuttall July 24, 1878. She was a daughter of William Ephraim Nuttall and Rosamond Watson. She was born September 22, 1860, at Provo, Utah. She died April 18, 1881, three days after her little son, John Ford, was born, on April 15. The baby died April 29, 1881.

937

938

and both are buried at Wallsburg. John died March 24, 1938, and is buried in Wallsburg.

In later years, John married another fine woman, Celestia Higginson Johnson, at Provo, Utah. They had one son, Fordie Eugene. Celestia also had a son, Val Johnson, by her previous marriage.

When John was just nine years old he and his mother drove their teams and wagons across the plains to Utah. John's father, Martin, had decided that the time had come for them to leave, for the rebellion was raging between the North and South. John remembered so well seeing the soldiers marching past their place. Martin had sold his farm and crops, bought a team of horses, one of cows, and one of oxen and wagons and supplies, and they left. But Martin, being a carpenter and wheelwright, was kept busy repairing broken-down wagons, so couldn't take much time for driving, thus having wife and child take over the lines.

After coming from Provo to Wallsburg to live, John remembered living in the old fort and the fear they had of the Indians.

John was a tall, slender young man and a very good athlete. He was a musician, playing the violin and piccolo, and when a young man he sang in the Church choir. He was a carpenter and, with his brother William, made coffins, very beautifully built and finished. He was a fine blacksmith. He helped to get the ties out for building the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.

John was a rancher and cattleman. He had a fine ranch in the valley and raised a very good grade of cattle. He took keen interest in public affairs and in all social activities of his young days.

Mary Eleanor Nuttall Ford was a Church worker, taking part in all social gatherings as well. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. She did beautiful sewing on clothes by hand.

John spent most of his life in Wallsburg among friends and with his family. He died at the old home in 1938. He sat on the grand jury of Wasatch in those early years.

JOHN FORD AND ELEANOR
NUTTALL AND SARAH
CELESTIA HIGGINSON
JOHNSON

John Ford was born August 22, 1853, at Trader's Point, Mills County, Iowa, son of Martin Ford and Zibiah Meriba Stoker. He married Mary Eleanor Nuttall July 24, 1878. She was a daughter of William Ephraim Nuttall and Rosamond Watson. She was born September 22, 1860, at Provo, Utah. She died April 18, 1881, three days after her little son, John Ford, was born, on April 15. The baby died April 29, 1881.

937

938

and both are buried at Wallsburg. John died March 24, 1938, and is buried in Wallsburg.

In later years, John married another fine woman, Celestia Higginson Johnson, at Provo, Utah. They had one son, Fordie Eugene. Celestia also had a son, Val Johnson, by her previous marriage.

When John was just nine years old he and his mother drove their teams and wagons across the plains to Utah. John's father, Martin, had decided that the time had come for them to leave, for the rebellion was raging between the North and South. John remembered so well seeing the soldiers marching past their place. Martin had sold his farm and crops, bought a team of horses, one of cows, and one of oxen and wagons and supplies, and they left. But Martin, being a carpenter and wheelwright, was kept busy repairing broken-down wagons, so couldn't take much time for driving, thus having wife and child take over the lines.

After coming from Provo to Wallsburg to live, John remembered living in the old fort and the fear they had of the Indians.

John was a tall, slender young man and a very good athlete. He was a musician, playing the violin and piccolo, and when a young man he sang in the Church choir. He was a carpenter and, with his brother William, made coffins, very beautifully built and finished. He was a fine blacksmith. He helped to get the ties out for building the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.

John was a rancher and cattleman. He had a fine ranch in the valley and raised a very good grade of cattle. He took keen interest in public affairs and in all social activities of his young days.

Mary Eleanor Nuttall Ford was a Church worker, taking part in all social gatherings as well. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. She did beautiful sewing on clothes by hand.

John spent most of his life in Wallsburg among friends and with his family. He died at the old home in 1938. He sat on the grand jury of Wasatch in those early years.

HOV

JOHN FORD AND ELEANOR
NUTTALL AND SARAH
CELESTIA HIGGINSON
JOHNSON

John Ford was born August 22, 1853, at Trader's Point, Mills County, Iowa, son of Martin Ford and Zibiah Meriba Stoker. He married Mary Eleanor Nuttall July 24, 1878. She was a daughter of William Ephraim Nuttall and Rosamond Watson. She was born September 22, 1860, at Provo, Utah. She died April 18, 1881, three days after her little son, John Ford, was born, on April 15. The baby died April 29, 1881,

937

JOHN FORD AND ELEANOR
NUTTALL AND SARAH
CELESTIA HIGGINSON
JOHNSON

John Ford was born August 22, 1853, at Trader's Point, Mills County, Iowa, son of Martin Ford and Zibiah Meriba Stoker. He married Mary Eleanor Nuttall July 24, 1878. She was a daughter of William Ephraim Nuttall and Rosamond Watson. She was born September 22, 1860, at Provo, Utah. She died April 18, 1881, three days after her little son, John Ford, was born, on April 15. The baby died April 29, 1881,

937

938

HON

and both are buried at Wallsburg. John died March 24, 1938, and is buried in Wallsburg.

In later years, John married another fine woman, Celestia Higginson Johnson, at Provo, Utah. They had one son, Fordie Eugene. Celestia also had a son, Val Johnson, by her previous marriage.

When John was just nine years old he and his mother drove their teams and wagons across the plains to Utah. John's father, Martin, had decided that the time had come for them to leave, for the rebellion was raging between the North and South. John remembered so well seeing the soldiers marching past their place. Martin had sold his farm and crops, bought a team of horses, one of cows, and one of oxen and wagons and supplies, and they left. But Martin, being a carpenter and wheelwright, was kept busy repairing broken-down wagons, so couldn't take much time for driving, thus having wife and child take over the lines.

After coming from Provo to Wallsburg to live, John remembered living in the old fort and the fear they had of the Indians.

John was a tall, slender young man and a very good athlete. He was a musician, playing the violin and piccolo, and when a young man he sang in the Church choir. He was a carpenter and, with his brother William, made coffins, very beautifully built and finished. He was a fine blacksmith. He helped to get the ties out for building the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.

John was a rancher and cattleman. He had a fine ranch in the valley and raised a very good grade of cattle. He took keen interest in public affairs and in all social activities of his young days.

Mary Eleanor Nuttall Ford was a Church worker, taking part in all social gatherings as well. Their marriage was later solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. She did beautiful sewing on clothes by hand.

John spent most of his life in Wallsburg, among friends and with his family. He died at the old home in 1938. He sat on the grand jury of Wasatch in those early years.

938

John Oakley Ford

Winnie G. Ford

Winnie Leola Gibson Ford, age 92, died April 2, 1990 in Scott Lake City.

born December 8, 1897 in Pittsburg, California, to Daniel Bell and Jane Elizabeth Marriot Gibson. Married John Oakley Ford, March 30, 1920 in Scott Lake City. He died in March 1983. She was a member of the LDS Church.

Survived by a daughter, Lucille G. Block, Carson City, Nevada; a son, Gerald R. Ford, Pittsburg, California; 14 grandchildren; ten great-grandchildren; three great-great-grandchildren. Will be held Wednesday, April 4, 1990 at 10 a.m. in the Scott Lake City Cemetery. Friends may call at Mockay Colonial Mortuary, 2128 So. State Street, Wednesday, 11:30-12:30 p.m.